"People think of us as Nixon's "Feople think of us as Nixon's ktile grey men," says 24-year-old Tex Lezar, a presidential speech writer. Bespeciated, his brown hair askew, and wearing - yes - a rumpled grey suit, Lezar is quist, something of a "boy genius," I am told, who devours 10 books a week, fences and sails supering and place fences and sais superbly, and plays chess constantly. Bushing et the description, Lezar bowed his head and tooked up at me with a wry smile, "I think in the beginning White House recruiters jumped to conclusions about me," he said, "because after I graduated from Yale, I was talked into working as

Latin American states show new interest in Cuba ties

BUENOS AIRES (Ofns). -UBA is gradually being reintegrated into the Latin American community after having been a pariah for 10 years. Throughout most of the last decade only Mexico had an ambassador in Havana. But at the end of 1970 the socialist Salvador Allende was elected President of Chile and was quick to redeem his campeign pledge to rec-ognize Cuba. In July 1972 the Pe- fishing vessels operating within 200 Velasco Alvarado sent a full ambassador to Fidel Castro's regime. Panama are wavering.

These countries have taken the Kissinger thesis of five major po-wer centres --- the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Japan and Western Europe, all potentially equidistant and of comparable influseriously, and have been energetically forging commercial and diplomatic links with Peking, something unthinkable a few years ago. Now many governments are show-ing interest in doing the same with Cuba.

Both Chile and Peru have foun themselves in open opposition to Washington on several occasions, due to the nationalization of U.S. interests. Ecuador has shown few inhibitions against arresting U.S.

Lanusse is more worried by the mounting ambitions of Brazil than by the prospect of Castrolte guer-rillas, and has done his best to piece together an alliance with the other Spanish-speaking states against the giant neighbour. This has entailed fairly warm relations with Chile and Peru.

Lanusse has also recognized Peking as the legitimate Government of China. In this context the Joy attitude towards Cuba appears a strange anomaly. The Argentine Foreign Ministry, however, is well aware that powerful groups inside Argentina, especially certain milli-tary officers, are still against any dealing with Castro. The Govern-ment is therefore striving to avoid any impression of undue heate but any impression of undue haste, but privately admits that recognition of the Castro regime again is only a matter of time.

As Mexico never broke off rela-tions with the Castro Government or agreed to apply sanctions against it, the re-establishment of Argentine diplomatic ties will mean that two of the Latin American "Big Three" will have ambassadors in Havana before too long. Brazil's right-wing military regime, however, is still very reluctant to have anything to do with Fidel Castro, and together with Bolivia, also ruled by right-wing soldiers, is endeavour-ing to maintain the status quo.

Cuba was declared an outlaw by the Organization of American States in 1962 and, in obedience to extremely strong U.S. pressure, all member states apart from Mexico they would do it themselves in order to please the Western world at agreed to break their ties with the island. It was hoped that this would be enough to bring Fidel Castro to heel and cause him to end his undeclared guerrilla war against the "bourgeois" or military regimes of Latin America. In 1964 the OAS went even further, and with Mexico standing aside once again - applied economic sanc-

ON THE BANDWAGON

Business and Finance

The widespread impression that rade is bringing Israel and West-ern Europe closer together does not seem to be borne out by the facts. Statistics show that despite Israel's preferential tarif agreement with the Common Market, imports and exports have remained virtually un-

In 1971, the Six accounted in 31 per cent of Israel's imports, and the market for 27 per cent of Israel exports. (The import figure isidentical with that of 1968; in exports, it shows a slight drop 'from the pre-Six Day War figure.) Statistics for the first half of 1972, furil thermore, show a small increase in the amount Israel imports from the Six, and a sharp drop in Israeli exports.

Nor is the picture any different when the shree states due to join the E.E.C. on January 1 are considered. Here exports have declined, due to Britain's economic troubles. It is true that imports from Britain have increased, but that is only because of a dramatic rise in supply of raw diamonds handled by the London Syndicate.

More and more, Israel seems to be exporting to countries outside the European continent. Ten years ago, non-European markets accounted for just over one-third of Israel's exports; today they are more than is one-half. Imports from North America were virtually unchanged from 1967 to 1971 (25 per cent, while exports jumped from 18 per cent to 21 per cent. In the same period, Israeli imports from Latin America Israeli imports from Latin America most other regions except Japan. dropped from 19 to 16 per cent, Between 1958 and 1970, the G.N.P. while exports rose from 22 per cent of the Nine almost doubled, while to 28 per cent. - 13 EB

The same figures show that mar-kets outside Western Europe have accounted for much of the massive export growth in the past decade.

NEWER LINES

The table shows that while the Common Market still accounts for a major share in our traditional export lines, it plays only a minor role in the newly-developed export in-

The above figures explain why ) the impending entry of Britain, Denmark and Ireland into the Common Market has caused great worry among citrus growers and canners, but much less so among other manu-THE facturers. The point is obviously trade negotiations with the E.E.C., intended to Tead to an eventual abolition of mutual tariffs for most industrial products and for 80 per cent of agricultural products. If the planned Mediterranean Free Trade F Area is to have the desired effect,

In an article on our opinion page yesterday, Economic Editor Moshe Ater said that Israel must beware of over-estimating its negotiating strength in the enlarged Common Market - the Brussels ministers are hard bargainers. Today, Dr. Ater argues that the figures prove that the Common Market is in fact accounting for less and less of Israel's foreign trade.

At this juncture, the composition and the target exchange rate for of our imports from the Common our imports. Market is also of interest.

Five years ago this target rate was laid down (by the authorities) at 11.5.50 i.e. 80 per cent above the then official exchange rate. Now The Common Three Market the manufacturers request to have it raised to IL7, i.e. to put it again

The figures show that E.E.C.'s position is strongest in the supply of investment goods (i.e. mainly industrial equipment) and consumer durables (the raw materials figure is inflated by raw diamonds). It stands to reason that the planned tariff preference will result in our complete dependence on the techno-

India plans big imports of food

By TREVOR DRIEBERG

Jerusalem Post Correspondent NEW DELHI. — The Indian Government has decided to import nearly two million tons of grain, pulses and edible oils to tide the country over the shortage of these commo-dities. Negotiations have began with Australia, Canada, New Zea-land and the U.S. for wheat against payment in foreign money.

The Indian Government does not supplies of wheat under Public Law 480. No imports of rice are being negotiated, but they are not ruled out under the bilateral trade agreements with Burma and Thailand.

The bill for grain imports in 1971-72 was $165m. against $284m. in 1970-71. Imports in 1972-73 are expected to rise to $200m.

CAUSE AND EFFECT

WHEN stones are thrown in Mea Shearim at policemen or bus drivers whose company requires them to report for work as soon as the Sabbath is out and the queues begin to build up, the customary explanation is that "it was only children." These children may be boys of 12 or 14, better hands at throwing stones than their elders. but. what is more significant, it is not noticed that they are either reproved or stopped by those who claim not to be responsible for the result. It is not a very far guess from that point to the assumption that the stone-throwers have heard talk that causes them to suppose that their action will be supported by their fathers and the rabbis of the community.

It need not surprise us that a few years later the stonethrowers become yeshiva students, do not hesitate to burn a shop in Tel Aviv of which they disapprove, or launch an attack on the Chief Rabbi - who no doubt disapproves of the shop in question as much as anybody --if he announces a decision that displeases them. We cannot be forced to agree with a rabbi's ruling or with that of a judge if we consider it mistaken, but if public life is not to degenerate into jungle existence the rulings of those legally empowered to make decisions can be challenged only by argument or appeal. A distraught patient or relative who attacks a Kupat Holim doctor for his decision is fined, and a mother of eight who assaults a welfare worker is sent to pri-son, because it is essential that son, because it is essential that empted from army service in public officials be free to carry order to fight on the streets.

The worst possible outcome of this second round of negotiations would be the discovery, one day two or three years hence, that the West had conducted a par-backs up its negotiators in refusing to take no for an answer to questions about freedom of movement; in declining to disarm unilaterally; in going on telling the Communist governments that they cannot expect easy credits from the West unless they make life more tolerable for their peo-ple in non-economic ways too. If this can be done, the process that Mr. Brandt has started will that these are merely rhetorical indeed end as he wanted it to. It is equally likely, and probably likeller, that it will finish in a draw, with nothing much of im-portance lost for Western Euthem, by giving it a different name. rope but nothing much gained on behalf of Eastern Europe either. But unless the West shows more constancy than it has lately it may not even go that well; and Does Koor also practise this kind then the judgment will be that the Ostpolitik was the beginning of a profound defeat.

and although the case-law that previously governed the routes to Berlin had worked perfectly well for a decade it is satisfactory to have got it written down. The people who live in West Berlin are now allowed to go into the eastern half of the city, and West Germans who live in a strip of territory along the border of East Germany may now pass through the barbed wire and the mine-fields, under certain limitations, to visit a similar strip on the other side — although East Germans who hold official positions have apparently been forbidden to meet these dangerous entrants from the West. The East German Government claims to be releas-ing 30,000 prisoners including some political prisoners.
